Holiday Pleasure Palace

THERE are more sorts of Christmas enjoyment crowded into this store than were ever before centered in any single place in New York. And it is all free as the air. Of course this is a place of business; but it is also a place for public pleasure.

To-day the Christmas interests approach completion. The colossal Kris Kringle beams with Cheapness of the right sort. a great welcome. Christmas greens and holly berries climb over the sides of the rotundaa great mistletoe bower.

On the fourth floor, about the usual matinee hour, to-day, the tableau of the

will be revealed. The mythical old Saint Nicholas has fallen asleep and dreams of all the holidays-Thanksgiving, Fourth of July, Easter, Christmas. But Christmas plays the larger part in his vision. The impatient reindeer wonder when he will awake. The Brownies contribute the elfin humor. It makes a happy sight—see it.

Puss in a Corner

In a corner of the third floor—Cats. Blooded, high-bred cats, Angoras, from Walnut Hills Farm. Fash-ion's cat fad demands recognition in our holiday plans. And so this collection comes—kittens and cats—for your amusement. "Curious," you say. Not a bit of it. These are the very aristocracy of cats. Then why not give them welcome?

The Great Book Store.

CALENDARS and Booklets from the very least priced to the richest. Popular books for trifling costs. Cheap Editions that are spreading good literature into every nook and corner. And then, too, the richest limited Editions, holiday books in rich bindings. The stock is classified by subjects. Books for children—almost without limit. The intelligence of New York has found our Book Store. The verdict of approval appears in the great sales. Thanks!
